Explosion Fires Sizer Home In Mokena

About 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Thursday, an oil burning water heater in the kitchen of the Frank Sizer home on the south side of Mokena exploded setting the kitchen on fire. The prompt arrival of the Mokena Fire Department saved the dwelling from destruction.

Mrs. Sizer was seated in the living room of her home listening to the radio when the explosion occurred. She was badly frightened and jumped out of a bedroom window. She ran to the Carl Wolters home nearby and gave the alarm.

A refrigerator standing alongside of the wrecked oil burner was also ruined by the flames and the kitchen was badly scorched and smoked.

Mrs. Sizer was just recovering from a severe illness. She was home alone at the time of the explosion her husband being at work in Chicago and the children were in school in Mokena.

FRANKFORT LIONS CHARTER NIGHT GRAND AFFAIR

The third annual Charter Night of the Frankfort Lions club was held in St. Peter's Evangelical church parlors in Frankfort, Tuesday evening and was a very enjoyable affair and quite well attended. Following the dinner a program was presented with Arthur Lambrecht in charge as Master of Ceremonies. Needless to say, he was up to his usual par excellence.

There were a number of musical selections, community singing and a lot of genuine Lion fun. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Carl Winters of the Oak Park Baptist church who used for his subject the title "Greatness Passing By" in which he pointed out that many times great personalities pass by almost unnoticed. He cited various instances in history of men who later became great who were at one time unknown and their greatness passed by.

The ladies of St. Peter's church served a very delicious chicken dinner which was very thoroughly appreciated. The Joliet Lions club who sponsored the Frankfort club several years ago was well represented. Among their officers attending was Attorney Frank Brummond, very prominent in Joliet Lions circles.

A young mother and baby daughter met a tragic death in their home in Lincoln Estates early yesterday, Thursday, morning. The victims were Mrs. Robert Bass, 25 years old and daughter Judy 3 years old.

About one o'clock yesterday morning Ernest Goering and Andrew Alberts were returning home from work at the International Harvester Co. plant in Chicago, when they noticed a fire on 80th avenue in the Lincoln Estates which is southwest of Lincoln Highway.

When they drew nearer to the fire scene they saw that it was the Robt. Bass home. They aroused the McLean household, neighbors of the Bass family. Soon other neighbors were aroused and rushed to the burning home, which was a five room bungalow. Mrs. McLean, close friend of Mrs. Bass called the latter, but there was no response. The little home was a mass of flames. As Mrs. Bass and the little girl were not seen about the place, it was conjectured that they had perished in the flames.

Mrs. McLean hurried home and phoned Mr. Bass at the R. R. Donnelly printing plant in Chicago where he is employed as a printer on the night shift, that his home was burning. Mr. Bass arrived at about 2 o'clock and the news of the tragic death of his wife and little daughter was gently broken to him.

About 4 o'clock in the morning the fire and heat had died down enough so a search could be made of the ruins and the charred body of the young mother with her arms clasping her little daughter as tho to shield her, was found in the smoldering ruins of the once happy and pretty little home. From the position of the bodies it is thought the mother was trying to escape from the burning home when overcome. The bodies were found in what was a front bedroom facing east. A door and a window had been near the spot where the bodies were found. But the mother was unable to reach either.

Deputies from the office of Dr. Kingston, Will County coroner arrived toward morning and removed the remains.

The fire was of undetermined origin. It appeared to have started in the rear of the dwelling and swept eastward thru the little home. Everything in the place was destroyed. Lincoln Estates has no fire department and there was no way of combating the blaze.

Besides the grief stricken husband, Mrs. Bass is survived by her mother and sister residing in Chicago. The parents of Mr. Bass reside in Mokena.

Mrs. Bass had told Mrs. McLean on Wednesday afternoon that she was going to get a permanent Thursday and Judy had looked forward to spending the day in the McLean home. The neighbors say the Bass family was an ideal one and they were very happy in their cute little home set in a veritable beauty spot of nature in the summertime.

The tragic deaths of this unfortunate family came as a great shock to the entire territory.

Finds Tinley Park Times In Africa

Feb. 21, 1943
Tinley Park Times,
Tinley Park, Ill.
Dear Friends:

For quite some time, I have received the Times, weekly, until I was transferred to another camp. There I neglected to inform you of my change in address, for we were quite busy and made a sudden move for overseas.

I am in Africa now, where I have been approximately four months, and have received only one copy. A few weeks ago as I was in one of the newly established service clubs, I was looking thru a stack of newspapers, which had been thrown together, from all parts of the United States. To my great surprise, I spotted a Tinley Park Times among them. According to this, there must be someone here from that vicinity. If you know of anyone, I would appreciate it to be informed of their present address. I enclose my present address to avoid any further delay, if you are willing to send the Times out here. A few lines from anyone, is appreciated at any time. Many thanks in advance.

Your friend,
Pfc. Alvin Niemeyer,
36343485, Hq. Btry. 41st F. A. Bn.
APO 3, care Postmaster New York City.

Editor's note: Are we willing, Alvin, I'll say we are. Anything we can do to help and cheer you boys along makes us very happy. Hope you get this paper and will endeavor to send address of others who may be in your locality. Good luck!

Where Tunis Air Raid Was Plotted

The roulette table in this old gambling casino in Tunisia is the plotting room for planning the air raid on the Axis-held El Auina field, Tunisia. This was prior to the great tank battle of Kasserine Pass, in which American armored forces, after serious reverses, hammered back Rommel's dangerous thrust westward towards Tebessa.

Flying Fortresses Foray in Solomons

Leaving fire and destruction in their wake, U. S. army Flying Fortresses carry out a bombing sortie on Japanese installations on Gizo island in the Solomons. The raid was part of a triple-pronged aerial thrust against the enemy during the fight for Guadalcanal. The starboard wing of the Flying Fortress from which a U. S. navy photographer snapped this picture is visible at the extreme right.

Jap Zeros in Alameda Naval Base

The Alameda naval air base, California, had a visitation of Japanese float-type Zeros, but no bombs were dropped. The planes, in various stages of disrepair, were shot down in the war zone and brought back for such purposes as the navy department may see fit to put them to. Photo shows a sample of what happens to these frail Japanese craft when they come under the guns of U. S. forces in the Pacific.

Little Brown Church in Wildwood

This chapel of Our Lady of Loretto was erected by U. S. soldiers at an American base in the South Pacific. The chapel is used for Catholic and Protestant services, and is well attended.

Governor of Algeria

When High Commissioner Henri Giraud announced the appointment of Marcel Peyrouton as governor general of Algeria it created quite a stir there, which later subsided when the appointment was sanctioned by the United Nations. Here we see the new Algerian governor general seated at his desk executing the duties of office. His aide, J. Fabregoule, stands behind him.

Hat Blackout

Luminous straw hats will be the rage this summer, what with blackouts and dimouts. This excellent safety device is a straw hat for men treated with luminous paint, which will glow for hours after a moment's exposure to day or electric light. Above, hat is shown before being treated, and below is a picture made by the hat's luminous qualities as it would appear to an automobile driver at night.

RUSSIAN SOCIALISM WANES

The Russians are doing more than reversing the direction of Nazi military movement. They are also reversing certain important political and social directions.

Americans in Russia now report the reappearance of shoulder insignia on the officers of the Red army—for the first time since the dark days of the Revolution.

In those days, officers who supported the Bolshevik movement wore the epaulettes from their uniforms as a mark of democracy. Those who failed to do so were regarded as enemies of the Revolution, and in some extreme cases, mobs attacked them, drove nails through the epaulettes into their shoulders.

There is also a change in official awards or decorations, indicating that Bolshevik scorn for heroes of the past is vanishing. Three of the most coveted decorations of the Soviet Union today are the award of "Nevski," who was a 13th century prince, and the awards of "Suvorov" and "Kutuzov," who were Czarist generals at the time of Napoleon.

Also the St. George's cross, which would have been torn from the breast of the wearer a few years ago, has made its reappearance at official functions.

The U. S. public has the impression of modern Russians as dressed in coarse, formless clothing, but reports from the USSR today state that Red army officers dress with such punctilio as to make American officers' look shabby by comparison.

LITTLE AID TO CHINA

Just back from Chungking, General "Hap" Arnold, chief of the air forces, gave a glowing report to Secretary of War Stimson regarding Chinese resourcefulness in battling the Japs. He was amazed and full of praise for Chinese ingenuity in repairing planes, landing in cow pastures and conserving fuel.

As far as General Arnold is concerned he would like to send the Chinese a lot more planes—though in the past he has not been too keen about it. (Incidentally, one reason for sending him to China was to win him over to the Chinese cause.)

However, despite Madame Chiang Kai-shek's graceful appearance here, despite Hap Arnold's enthusiasm, despite the President's public statements, China is not going to get anything much in the way of supplies.

Reasons Listed.

Reasons are: (1) the impossibility of opening the Burma road now with the monsoon season only a few weeks off; (2) the absolute necessity of cleaning up Africa and preparing for a drive against Hitler in Europe; (3) Chinese political dissension which requires too many aims for personal armies.

Some war weapons will be flown over the Himalayas, but not much more than in the past.

SECRET RUMI PLAN VOTE

The vote of the house ways and means committee on the Rumi plan was secret, but inside fact is it never had a chance of getting more than five votes.

The flood of mail reaching committee members, at first favorable, turned round and showed conclusively that the country was against outright postponement of taxes. Underlying sentiment expressed in the mail was that although high taxes hurt, it was unfair to postpone too much of the war cost to the next generation.

Also the committee became more and more convinced that the Rumi plan was largely cooked up for the benefit of top bracket incomes, and if taxes were forgiven one year, it would mean shifting a much greater burden to lower income groups to make up the deficit.

This, they concluded, was just what Mr. Rumi's war wealthy clients wanted.

CURE FOR TYPHUS

By way of London has come word that the Germans have evolved a cure for the dread disease typhus. If so, it is a discovery meaning the lives of thousands of men in the eastern front. In 1914 "General Typhus" was responsible for more lives than machine gun fire, and from time to time it has ravaged the Balkans, Russia and eastern Europe ever since.

The German cure was discovered by a Dr. Van Meerdock and is a combination of atebirin and plasmo-chin. U. S. Public Health officials have their fingers crossed regarding the cure, but British medical circles seem to be favorably impressed.

CAPITAL CHAFF

General Eisenhower has sent word to Washington that there are too many news correspondents running around North Africa.

Budget Bureau has prepared a plan for consolidating all picture-making branches of war department—signal corps, air corps, special services, and strategic services.

The senate's 75-year-old athlete Theodore Green of Rhode Island eats a buttered muffin and coffee for breakfast, a bowl of soup and a glass of milk for lunch.

Farm Curves Aid To Victory Effort

New Land Patterns Making Appearance

Farming on the contour, following the "curve of the land," is helping to win the war for the United Nations.

A revolutionary method, farming on the contour not only is helping produce bigger yields but also it is saving soil and water to insure a continued longtime productive capacity. Cost of production, too, has been cut as much as 70 cents per acre by contour farming because conservation methods save fuel, fertilizer, time, machinery-wear and labor—all essential to a wartime production economy.

Just as Columbus had faith in his belief that the world was not flat and proved it by discovering the continent which now has become the hemisphere of the Americas, men today have proved that the land can be farmed successfully and profitably on the contour. Just as Washington and Jefferson saw in their day a need for soil conservation practices, men of the past half century also have seen the good earth washing and blowing away, and have developed the remedy.

Vernie Marshall of Texas is one of the current group of men who has seen the effects of soil erosion and who has assumed leadership in helping to solve the problem. Long a pioneer of the idea that farmers must act to check soil erosion, Vernie Marshall was largely responsible for enactment of the Soil Conservation Districts law in the Lone Star state. As administrator of the Soil Conservation board he is promoting the cause of conservation farming, and more than 70 districts have been organized in Texas under supervision of the board.

Twelve-year-old son of J. C. Taylor, Coryell county, Texas, helps his father improve the farm. Taylor practices contour cultivation, strip cropping and terracing. Well-vegetated terrace outlets and reseeded pasture complete the farm conservation program.

"Straight" farming, with the fence rows and up and over the hills and slopes, once was common practice and resulted in immense erosion problems. In 1935 and 1936 there were six million acres of land subject to erosion in the Dust Bowl area.

During the past few years farmers have worked co-operatively together and have established erosion control measures.

Chicken Disease Control

Cecal coccidiosis, a disease particularly destructive to chickens, has been effectively prevented experimentally and may eventually be controlled by the use of a chemical compound developed for this purpose.

Cecal coccidiosis is caused by microscopic organisms known as protozoa which invade and attack the cell lining of the cecal pouches of poultry, causing stunting, weakness, and eventual death.

While several sulphur compounds have shown some promise, tetraethyl thiuram monosulfide, when fed experimentally in unadulterated form, appears to be the most satisfactory drug yet tested.

Decision to concentrate further investigation on tetraethyl thiuram monosulfide is based on the results of preliminary experiments conducted at the University of Wisconsin.

Farm Notes

To relieve fertilizer manufacturers of distress caused by rising labor and other operating costs, permission was recently granted them to increase prices of mixed fertilizers and of superphosphate.

Cotton is of such great importance in meeting military and civilian demands that the United States is now consuming more than 45,000 bales each day.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

MURDER at PIRATE'S HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT

W-N-U-RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $500 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. The body of a man identified as Roddy Lane is found in a chest in the basement of the church, but disappears a few hours later. A fish shed burns, apparently killing an old man named Brown who is supposed to have lived there, and Uncle Wylie's pipe is found near the burned shed. Evidence has also been found against Bessie Norcross, her brother Hugh, Albion Potter and the Reverend Jonas DeWitt, when the anonymous letter mysteriously disappears.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER X

Victor's hand was on the door-knob. "You keep close to me, Judy." I flushed again. "But I don't see—we could always get them to give us a sample of their penmanship. I remember the funny capital 'F' in Friend; it had a flourish on it."

Victor might have been speaking to a child. "The point is, my dear, that the comparison is no longer important—with the original gone. But it lets Lane and Brown out, in a way, and a possible third-party killer in. Don't you see?"

"I thought you believed that all the time, the way you were questioning everybody, Mr. Quade."

"Let me handle this. You keep mum. Maybe I'll spring a trap. Bills are from all over the country, and none in sequence, just as I surmised. Smart boy, this criminal!" He reached over and laid a hand on my shoulder. "Be careful, won't you?"

"I'll stick like a burr," I smiled thinly, following him out into the hall. Then I hurried upstairs and stuck the cash in my bureau drawer and raced down. Chowder or no chowder, I was going with the bunch this time. They could eat canned soup if Auntie couldn't manage alone.

Besides, Victor had whetted my curiosity almost as much as my fear by the warning he'd given me. I had no intention of staying behind and being grabbed and searched by some unknown assassin while the menfolk were down by the Pirate's Mouth. I simply couldn't believe the murderer was one of our guests, and my own guess would have been that Lane was responsible.

We found the gang gathered around Albion Potter, who was dabbing at his little church picture. "Your aunt gave me some kerosene," he beamed.

"Ain't it swell?" shrilled Lily Kendall.

"Fine," I said, wondering who on earth would want it after what had happened there.

"If you like it, I'll give it to you, Miss Jason," Potter said shyly.

"Well, I'd be delighted, Mr. Potter," I tried to sound sincere.

"Do one for me and I'll pay you $25," Lily said. "I'm dyin' to have one to show my niece."

"Twenty-five dollars!" Albion was overcome. "Miss Kendall, I'll begin it at once. Unless Judy—Miss Jason," he corrected himself hurriedly, "will let me give you this one and do her another. Fact is, I could use that money for an easel."

"Sure. Sell every chance you get." I ran down the steps where Mr. Quincy was thumping his cane and hollering, "Well, well—what are we waiting for?"

We were waiting for Hugh Norcross. He fluttered an orange square of silk at his sister. "Tie your hair up with this, Bess. You're right, that blue scarf has vanished. What of it? Get another for half a dollar."

"You could not. I paid two-seventy-five for that scarf last Christmas. And it isn't in any of my things, because I've hunted."

"Well, it doesn't matter," Hugh said crossly. "I wish you'd cheese it about that old scarf in the midst of—"

They started on ahead. Bessie, although the morning was growing warmer every minute, so that I was comfortable in my sleeveless print, still wore her bespotted white sports coat.

The minister's eyes kept glancing over his shoulder at Mr. Quincy, who worked his wheels while Lily Kendall guided the chair. She kept up her incessant chatter with all of them, but especially Mr. Potter. Could he do a portrait of her in her pink lace with crystal beads? No, the crystals, come to think of it, were broken. The jet would do. He could? She offered him $50 and he said, boy! would I wait for my church picture till he'd earned that?

"Gladly."

"You, or rather, Mrs. Gerry, will get some of it back. If—if I get a few commissions, I'll stay longer at the Head. It's so beautiful here."

I glanced at him and smiled. Maybe some of the other boarders would follow suit and Aunt Nella's season wouldn't be ruined, after all.

But as we neared the cliff where you take the treacherous path down into the Pirate's Mouth, he held back, shaking his head. "Not for me. I've had what-d-you-call-it-phobia—when you're afraid of high places? I wouldn't go down there for even $100."

"Nor I," Bessie agreed, drawing back.

"Why should anybody go down?" I asked. "You can see into the Pirate's Mouth by coming over to this rock and leaning over. You do it,

Mr. Quade. Mr. Norcross or Mr. De Witt will hold your legs. Like kissing the blarney stone."

"I'll look. Lemme. I don't get hydrophobia," Lily screamed.

We had to laugh, and it relieved the tension. Victor Quade lay down on the rock, but Lily grinned back at us.

"Oh, go ahead and laugh. High, ain't it? Of course I know hydrophobia is really what they call it when people play sick all the time. Like my niece, before she got in pictures. What I meant was cliff-tomania."

She flung her full bulk alongside Victor, till I held my breath lest she shove him into the deep. But in another moment Victor rose, shaking his dark head disappointedly.

"Nobody down there on that shelf. Not a thing, so far as I could see, with the fissure at the far end and the ocean below. What a frightful place! Either way, a thin person might roll off into the sea."

"Used to be called Lovers Nook," Bessie sighed. She walked away rapidly toward the church steps, with Hugh following to console her, as per usual.

"Won't somebody help Miss Kendall?" I asked.

But Lily yelled, "Don't touch me! I—I can get up myself."

It took her quite a time. The men turned away, politely, while the hot roistering land breeze played with her ballooning skirts. But finally the behemoth came panting up to me. "Somethin's rotten in Denmark!" she hissed. "Keep away from that Quade feller!"

Keep away from Victor? What could she mean? I was dying to make her be more explicit, but she shook her rigid marcel at me forbiddingly.

"Not now!" This time the hiss, whispered so that I don't see how anybody could have failed to overhear it, was a command.

It's only a few steps from the top of the cliff overhanging the vicious Pirate's Mouth to the site of the Quaker church. The inn guests were making toward Bessie and Hugh, seated on the steps. Victor came back beside Lily Kendall, who immediately switched to the other side of me.

"Great bootleggers' cache—that big shelf of rock, Judy."

"Yes. Uncle Wylie said the coast guard found some stuff hidden down there during prohibition. The bootleggers, fearing a raid, had tried the Pirate's Mouth, but somebody must have tipped them off."

Victor wasn't looking at me, I noticed. He was watching Lily Kendall. Why? She was marching, eyes and bosom front, like a grenadier.

"Well, even the police wouldn't find anything today," he sighed, giving her a side glance. She only pressed her lips tighter together.

"What did you expect to find—Roddy Lane?" I asked.

"Or old man Brown?" Mr. Quincy spoke up. He was looking at his watch. "Why, it's only five minutes of 9. Never saw a morning last so long or fly so fast, either."

"I'm practically starved," Bessie called. "Hugh wants a look at the golf club Mr. Quade says he saw in the basement. Then we're going back to the inn. I've got to have an aspirin."

"Why don't you go along back now?" Victor asked. "I'm sure—er—Miss Kendall will be glad to go with you."

"Sorry, Miss Kendall stays." This was the first time I'd heard Lily snap out of her kittenish role. "With the gang," she added, her lower lip protruding till she looked positively menacing.

"Wise lady," Victor shrugged. "I'll wait for my brother," Bessie said with finality. "Are we all to go down to that horrible cellar?"

"Why, of course not. Better if nobody went," Victor explained. "There is a club there. May be your brother's, maybe not. Doesn't prove a thing either way. What I thought was blood may be rust, perhaps, though I don't think so. The police will be ripping if we mess around too much. This is certain—none of us wants to leave fresh prints on anything down there."

"I wish I could go!" Thaddeus Quincy regretted plaintively. "Take the same committee you had before and have another look, Quade. And you men do what he tells you. He's up in this murder stuff and the rest of us aren't."

"Thanks for that double-edger. Victor Quinn accepts the compliment. Victor Quade has his doubts."

I gave Victor the key and the crowd piled into the little old musty church. Goodness! How dark it was! The cobwebby windows, with their darkly stained glass, showed scarcely any light at all. The vestibule was light enough where the sun streamed through, but save for that bright patch of searchlight sun down the main aisle, the pews were almost in a tomb till your eyes got—did I say tomb? Tomb is right!

Lily astonishingly took command. "Why should the men have all the fun? Come on, Judy Jason. We ain't murderers. We don't play golf. Let's us take a peek. Why give the real killer a chance to take his hanky and give the stick a swipe?"

Good idea, several conceded. Victor didn't like it. He was afraid we'd disturb the position of things, but Lily was already waddling down the main aisle.

The Rev. De Witt surprised us by announcing he was going outside with his glasses to take a squirt at the bridge. The milkman might be early. Picnickers might be arriving at the Head. Was it likely everybody was sleeping late after the night before celebration? And, look, he'd seen boats in the harbor. Not close, of course. But couldn't we signal? Build a fire? He stopped, remembering last night's, I suppose, and the uselessness of such procedure on the Fourth of July.

"Go along out and shoot off a couple of rockets," the artist added facetiously. Shall we help him, Mr Quade?"

"Why not? You've no call to stay here. It's occurred to me that the auction—"

That's all I heard. Lily and I took the narrow crooked basement stairs. She had to turn sideways, once, but she made it. I was glad Victor had given me back my flashlight. Even by daylight, that dank, rocky floor hole is spooky.

Lily stood quaking on the bottom stair while I tiptoed to the sea chest, closed now, and as innocent-looking as when I'd knelt in front of it and tried to wheedle the lock with a bobby pin. Only now the lock hung open.

I played my torch down the space between the chest and the wall. Sure enough, there was the golf club! I didn't want to touch it. The blood was unmistakable. It gave me the jitters.

"Come here, Miss Kendall. Look at this."

She came, quivering, and leaned down to pick it up.

"Wait." I handed her my handkerchief. "Use this. Just see if there are initials on the end and put it right back."

"Plain as day!" Lily gasped. "But I don't believe that nice Mr. Norcross did any killing—not after what I saw in—"

"Hurry up, you girls."

We both whirled at the sound of Victor's voice. Neither of us had heard him come down the stairs, but there he stood. I could hear the babble of voices above and the lashing of the sea outside. "Coming," I said, but Lily stood glaring at him.

"They're going to re-enact the auction," Victor whispered added caution to me: "You keep mum about the letter. Let me. Coming, Miss Kendall?" He started to stand aside on the stair to let her pass; then, seeing the futility, he went along up.

"O. K.," Lily said. "I'm right behind you. But you can't tell me that nice Hugh Norcross—"

Bessie cut in, chillingly: "So it was Hugh's club!" She was leaning down at the head of the stairs, the way I'd seen her that night she told me about the missing turpentine. Whenever I think of Bessie Norcross I see her brooding white face leaning over stairs, listening.

"And it doesn't prove a thing," Victor said, comfortingly.

"Sure, it don't, honey," Lily panted. "Proves he's innocent, if you ask me. The feller that done it left it on purpose. Your brother would 'a' thrown his into the sea to wash off the blood, if nothin' more."

"Then Quade was right?" Mr. Quincy, who'd been wheeled into the main aisle, worked his way nearer.

"There was blood on it?" he asked.

"Br-r-r-r-r!" No doubt about it. Somebody's done you dirt, Hugh Norcross."

Hugh grabbed my arm, while Bessie clung to the other one of his. "Dear, I wish you'd go back to the inn," he said.

Great 'Ice-Capades' Revue Held at Chicago Arena

Boasting of a star-studded cavalcade of gay blades, the greatest number of individual performers as well as the largest cast of any musical Ice-travaganza, "Ice-Capades of 1943" inaugurates the new spectacle season at Chicago Arena with a limited engagement starting Sunday night, March 14.

"Ice-Capades of 1943" is hailed as a three-in-one show of dazzling display. As it unfolds in all its prismatic beauty, it is first and last an exhibition of skating that frequently defies the laws of gravity. It is secondly a gorgeously costumed $150,000 production. It is also a ballet on skates scintillating with breath-taking beauty.

This Chicago Arena ice opus will fairly bristle with production and variety. There's the bombastic and colorful military opening utilizing victory drums; the Penguin or "Birds of a Feather" routine; "Toys For Sale"—a short but complete love story set to words and music, in lavish costuming and lighting; the famous Chester Hale girl precision as exemplified by the 48 Ice-Cap'ets in Pony Ballet; the novel and funny "Dancing Lesson"; the exotic "Minuet in Gold"; a rhythmic and sprightly "Ballroom On Ice"; the spectacular patriotic ballet "Design For Liberty"; and specialty star routines including the classical ballet on ice of dynamic Donna Atwood, holder of the women's national figure skating title of 1941, and Bobby Specht, U. S. Figure Skating Champion of 1942.—Adv.

Hitler's Seven

Hitler's high regard for the numeral 7 is shown by the fact that he holds Membership Card No. 7 in the Nazi party, that he allowed himself seven years to prepare for war and that he admits he will need seven years to conquer the world and another seven to teach the German people how to rule all humanity forever.

The new steel helmet just adopted by the Army is no longer called a "tin hat." It's a "head bucket" and when you see one you'll know why. Our soldiers have changed much of their slang since the last war, but not their preference for Camel Cigarettes. Now—as then—Camels are the favorite. They're the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard as well, according to actual sales records from service men's stores. This Great Game of Scouting

Many people often wonder if the time spent leading boys is worthwhile. Today more than ever before Scouting needs the help and assistance of every available man. Yes, Scouting is worthwhile; just read the excerpt from a letter of a former Scout to our Scout Executive of Potawatomi Trails Council. This lad has been in the army since August 24. He is now a Corporal expecting to be a sergeant any day now. He is an Eagle Scout. Here is part of his letter:

"As to how much Scouting has helped me in the Army I'd be lost without it. I wouldn't give up my Scout Training for anything on this man's earth!"

"When I was taking my basic training at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, I taught knot tying. Of course, being an Engineer Soldier, we had to know a few knots—they were the Tenderfoot Knots."

"Then when we went out on an overnight hike, I was selected because of my Scout Training to act as a Special First Aid Course that only 2 men to a platoon of 55 men could take. Then when it came to setting up the Army Pup tent in the dark, that was the best part. Some of those poor fellows had a hard time of it, they didn't know the first thing about it. Gee, how I remember the Camp-O-Ree when you really were stiff on judging us in regard to the way we had our tents pitched and dived. I am thankful now that you were that way, it only makes it easier for me now. You certainly would laugh to see the way some of the fellows make up their beds. It was awful. Again my camping experience in Scouting has helped me."

"I remember the time I tried to pass First Class Mapping and you turned me down. You then taught me how a map should be made. Today I am using that map making and map reading training for Uncle Sam. I am a topographer (Map Maker). The mapping we do is the same as First Class mapping except that it is 3 times more difficult but it was easy for me because I had the fundamentals."

This is the answer as to whether Scouting is worthwhile. Men like yourselves gave this young man his training and guidance. Yes, you too might receive a letter like this and then think how proud you would be because you had made the greatest contribution possible—the training of the youth of our country to be good American citizens. Isn't it worthwhile?

Dear Friends:
Sorry that I haven't written very regularly I've been so busy that there wasn't much spare time for letter writing, for that matter there isn't much time right now, but I thought I had better write before you thought that the little yellow boys had gotten me.

I'm in good health and right in the pink. It sure has been hot here. In fact I just can't keep cool. I think if I don't get any cooler I will melt away. The mosquitoes are sure bad. They do their night shift, and the flies and ants do their shift in the daytime, so they keep us going all day long.

Just give them time and they will give me screwy. I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for wonderful Christmas present that candy and gum was a life saver because we can't get any down here. Now that I've gotten this far I don't know what to write about.

Can't discuss the weather, can't discuss what I'm doing, can't discuss any of the things I used to be able to write when I was back in the States, makes it pretty tough to write at all but I guess I got to do the best I can. If you don't hear from me for a while now and then don't think that I don't want to write but at times we get pretty busy and don't get much time to write.

I'm sending you a poem wrote by an American soldier, and the answer to the poem wrote by an Australian Girl. Hope you like it.

I forgot to tell you that I received your welcome letter.

That all the news that I can think of so, will close. Thank you all again for that nice Christmas present.

North Africa

Dear Friends:

I received the letter you wrote on October 18, 1942 about a week ago. Not very good service was it? Well, just the same I was mighty glad to get it. I have written you once before to thank you for the swell package and the Tinley Park Newspaper. None of you know me personally and that makes the gifts and thoughtful remembrances even more appreciable. All you folks at home are doing a swell job at helping us keep our chins up.

As for news I can't say anything that would not be censored out of my letter so I'll have to stick to general things.

I've been in No. Africa for quite some time now and have become pretty well accustomed to the weather here. The nights are very cold and the days very hot, unless it rains the real hot weather hasn't set in yet so we expect to swelter when summer arrives. It seems funny to have a winter with no snow and to be getting a suntan instead of frost bite.

I hope my humble attempt to thank you folks is adequate. You have been very thoughtful to a stranger and I am counting on meeting all my unseen friends when I get back.

Thanks again for everything. Wishing you all the best till Victory I remain,

Cpl. W. Sternberg, 62nd Troop Carrier Sqdn. Group, APO 650 care Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

Let Us Have Faith

Besides buying War Bonds and Stamps, we here at home have a duty to perform to keep faith with the boys at the front. To keep ourselves financially strong so there'll be jobs and homes for them to come back to—and the kind of a country they're fighting for.

To this end this bank is co-operating with the people of our territory in every way possible. That is our duty, as we understand it.

A mile and a half every four minutes

An American machine gun in action for four minutes uses enough copper for a mile and a half of telephone wire!

This helps to explain why we can't install new equipment to handle all your telephone calls as promptly as we'd like to do. Copper and many other scarce materials have gone off to war.

Telephone service to civilians cannot possibly be "service as usual" in time of war. Long Distance circuits are crowded to the limit at times. Calls to some cities are often delayed. In many cases, we can't give new subscribers the type of facilities they want for home use.

Even so, most telephone users accept necessary restrictions with understanding. For your patience and co-operation, we are very grateful.

Mass Production of Uniforms calls for Electric Power

In making uniforms for the millions of men in America's armed forces—the Army, the Navy and the Marines—electric power is a vital force of mass production.

Electric knives and trimming machines cut out a number of uniforms at one time. High-speed electric sewing machines transform these cuttings into trim, comfortable, long-wearing uniforms. And electric irons apply the finishing touch with careful pressing and so pressing to meet rigid inspection.

Electric power speeds the production of uniforms just as it speeds the production of tanks and ships and planes.

To keep pace with the mass production cutting machines, these tailors use high-speed electric sewing machines in putting uniform pattern pieces together.

American soldiers, sailors and marines on fighting fronts throughout the world are clothed in uniforms made at record speed with the aid of Electric Power.

Administration Seeks To Harass The Press Says Senator Brooks

The following address on the essentiality of a free press was made by United States Senator C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois on the floor of the United States Senate, Tuesday of this week.

America is engaged today in the greatest war effort in its entire history, an effort that will tax the human, the material as well as the spiritual resources of a hundred and thirty-five million people to a greater extent than ever before. The restrictions and restraints, the sufferings and the sorrows of a global war are not only apparent but are becoming very real.

This war touches every shore, encompasses every sky and takes in every body of water on the face of the earth. We are in to win—we must win—we will win and America and its entire citizenry is willing to make any necessary sacrifice to that end.

But the question constantly arising in loyal American minds is how a free people can best utilize their form of Government, their manpower and their resources to win this war?

War is the most costly and devastating activity of man, and there must be a definite purpose for which men are willing to make supreme sacrifices. Our liberty, our right to be free was the result of a war. The purpose of that war was not entirely clear nor defined until there was a meeting of the minds resulting in the Declaration of Independence. With that defined determination, the armies of the colonies were united under one flag and victory was won. Out of it came a Government of written rules, of distributed authority, of divided powers made permanent by the writing and adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

Even the written Constitution was not satisfactory to the people who had made such great sacrifices for liberty. They demanded what is commonly known as the Bill of Rights in which they enumerated the rights of the people. The First Amendment provided as follows:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

Under this written form of Government with guaranteed human rights, we have become outstanding among those Nations of the earth where men of every nationality, creed and color, have assembled and live in harmony. Now we must stand our greatest test, "trial by battle" on all the seas, in all the skies and on the battlefronts of the entire world.

Early in this war, the President of the United States formulated two pronouncements as the laudable objectives for which we are fighting and dying. First, the Four Freedoms and Second, the Atlantic Charter.

There are some who fear that there are people in this country both in and outside of our Government service who would pull the flag of the Atlantic Charter so high that it would supersede our Constitution, and there are those who would elevate the banner of the Four Freedoms to such an extent that we would lose sight of our own Bill of Rights.

When you engage in war, you engage to win and war follows the rule of necessity—you do the things that are necessary to win. The strategy of the war, the type and size of your army, your navy and air corps, the type of weapons and their number are determined by the necessities of the hour and the turn of events, but we must be sure that that in all of this unprecedented war effort that we follow the rules laid down in the Constitution and continue to guard the human protection provided for in our Bill of Rights.

It is significant that the founding fathers included in the rights to be demanded for the people the following language: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of the press."

It can be truthfully said that the precious rights of individual men and the fundamental institution of our representative form of Government have been fostered and defended by the free Press of America more than by any other element of our national life, and that as long as we remain free men and are willing to fight, suffer and die individually to preserve a free form of Government, we must recognize no emergency as being so great as to necessitate the destruction or unnecessary abridgement of the free Press of America.

Recent orders and counter orders issued in connection with the amounts of paper to be used by newspapers arrest attention and cause concern regarding what seem to be related events going back over a number of years. Their character provokes inquiry and comment.

Approximately ten years ago, there was an attempt made under the guise of National Emergency to regulate all of the industries of America. So-called "Codes of Fair Competition" were drawn up for the various industries. But the bright minds who developed these "Codes of Fair Competition" forgot to take into consideration that the Press is one industry, and the only industry, that was guaranteed its Freedom from abridgment in the Constitution of the United States. The Bill of Rights was never intended to guarantee the Freedom of the Press only for the benefit of the publisher. The importance of the guarantee was the people's right to have the publisher free for their protection and their benefit.

Notwithstanding the provision of protection of the Press in the Bill of Rights, a Code of Fair Competition was drawn up for the newspaper industry of America. Each publisher assenting to this Code without reservation would have thereby waived his Constitutional rights and would have submitted himself to the future regulations and arbitrary rulings of an Administrator.

The newspapers of the country which have always guarded the rights provided for the people, waged a successful fight to have inserted a saving clause in the Code affecting newspapers, which read as follows:

"Those submitting this Code recognize that pursuant to Section 10-B of the Act, the President may from time to time cancel or modify any order approving this Code but in submitting or subscribing to this Code, the publishers do not thereby consent to any modification thereof, except as each may thereto subsequently agree, nor do they thereby waive any constitutional rights or consent to the imposition of any requirements that might restrict with the constitutional guarantee of the Freedom of the Press."

The President declared that nobody consenting to this Code waived any Constitutional rights, adding: "The recitation of the Freedom of the Press clause in the Code has no more place than would the recitation of the whole Constitution or the Ten Commandments."

The publishers, however, insisted that if this added section made no modification, there should be no objection to its inclusion and it was included.

It is well that it was, for shortly thereafter, the Attorney General, the appointed legal officer of the Administration, included the following paragraph in his brief in the case of the United States against the Weirton Steel Company, as follows:

"The defendant having applied for approval under the Recovery Act of a Code of fair competition and having obtained the benefits accruing to it under the Act, by reason of such approval, can not attack the Constitutionality of the provision of that Code."

It is a well settled rule in the Federal Courts that: "One who has himself voluntarily invoked a Statute, who has received the benefits flowing from a Statute, is estopped to assert its unconstitutionality."

In other words, the Attorney General did contend that those who had accepted the Code without reservations had waived their constitutional objections.

The predominant fear in the mind of the publishers of this country at that time was the fear of licensing by the Government of the Press of America. It might be well to point out that at the time of the drafting of the Constitution and the adoption of the Bill of Rights there were three agencies in this country that were predominant in the building of public opinion. They were the Press, the Public Platform and the Pulpits of America. It is significant that the people insisted that all three be guaranteed Freedom in the written Bill of Rights.

It might be well to further point out that at that time there were no movies and there was no radio and they are both subject to licensing or regulation by the Government today.

It was the predominant fear of the publishers, confronted with this bureaucratic developed Code, that there might be as insistence later to license the Press of America.

We find some evidence later that would bear that out. Last Spring when the Office of Defense Transportation issued its early Orders restricting the use of rubber-tired vehicles for the laudable purpose of saving rubber, no mention was made in these original orders of newspapers specifically. No recognition was given to their importance as an essential industry.

The drastic restrictions originally contemplated would have reduced the Press of America to one edition a day which would have resulted in putting many newspapers out of business.

After long periods of negotiations, modifications were adopted, resulting in a 40 per cent reduction in the mileage of newspaper trucks. Not only were the Constitutional guarantees of the Press overlooked but their importance to the National welfare was likewise overlooked and ignored. It might be pointed out here that in our modern civilization, the right to distribute the news is a part of the right to print it.

The Freedom of the Press can be abridged in many ways—by denying access to the news—denying the facilities to print or the facilities to distribute the printed word to the people by unnecessary and arbitrary regulations, restrictions or restraints.

This attitude of disregard for the rights of the Press was repeated in November in the issuance of ODT Order No. 21. Under this Order, a certificate of War Necessity was required for every commercial motor vehicle. Under its provisions, the Administrator had the power to designate the manner, purpose and between what points each and every vehicle should be operated. He also had the power to force the lease or rental of one owner's truck to another person or corporation.

Under this Order, both of these powers were to be given the Administrator, "notwithstanding any contract, lease or other commitment expressed or implied."

Again, the Press of America applying for Certificates of War Necessity under this Order were required to waive Constitutional and legal rights under a provision whereby they agreed to surrender the Certificate upon demand. Again, with its eternal vigilance, they insisted on a paragraph as follows:

"In filing the attached application for a Certificate of War Necessity the undersigned does not waive any Constitutional rights or consent to the imposition of any requirements that might restrict or interfere with the Constitutional guaranteed right of a newspaper publisher to distribute his publication."

Since that time there have been further curtailments and restrictions thru the rationing of rubber, gasoline, metals, machinery and other materials essential to the newspaper industry.

Again, in the drafting of the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, it was only after continued vigilance on the part of the Press of America that exemptions from price fixings of advertising and circulation rates were obtained.

The interference on the part of the Government by the use of F. B. I. agents visiting members of the Associated Press in an attempt to intimidate them and cause them to change their rules, and the subsequent suit brought by the Attorney General against the Associated Press, is continued evidence of harassment of the Press of this country by some men in the present Administration.

Censorship of the Press in time of war is most difficult and at the same time most dangerous. In theory, it can be used only to prevent valuable information from reaching the enemy. In practice, however, it can be used to keep bad news from reaching the American people, as was the case in the suppression of the facts regarding Pearl Harbor for a whole year after they were fully known to the enemy. Its use never should be tolerated to protect incompetence or to conceal mistakes and failures on the part of public servants. The Press cannot discharge its duty to the public if censorship is wrongfully administered.

The action on the part of the Federal Communications Commission since 1941 in preventing a newspaper from securing a license to operate a radio station, not because the public would not be well served but only because the applicant was a publisher of a newspaper, is indicative of a continued bias and hostility against the Press of America.

From time to time, the WPB has issued many orders important to the production of newspapers, such as metals, machinery, inks, etc., but the one material which forms the life-blood of a newspaper is newsprint, or the paper upon which the news is printed and distributed to the people.

For more than 18 months, various Bureaus and Departments of the Government have threatened to issue orders restricting the use of newsprint varying from 10 to 70 per cent. These threats have all been under the guise of war necessity, using the vaguest generalities as justification. Up to date, no genuine justification for these threatened curtailments has been made public.

The first order limiting the consumption of newsprint was issued by the WPB effective January 1st, 1943, which provided for an overall reduction of approximately 10 per cent. This, the Press accepted, although they questioned the necessity for such a reduction. Since then, there have been various reports and conflicting suggestions of further curtailment. But it was officially announced on February 9th that an order was soon to be issued effective April 1st of a further curtailment of newsprint amounting to another 10 per cent and it was intimated that there might be further curtailments to follow.

Thru the continued vigilance of the Press, aided by members of the House of Representatives, a demand was made for the facts upon which this order was to be issued demanding proof of the necessity for any further cut.

The facts to prove that a further cut was necessary were not submitted and on February 20th, ten days following the announcement by the Government that a further cut was absolutely necessary, it was officially announced that any further cut would be postponed indefinitely.

It is, of course, possible that this proposed curtailment was the unplanned result of the confusion which comes with the war effort. But it is fitting to inquire whether orders for a curtailment of use of paper by newspapers is a continuation of the harassment which has marked the present administration's attitude toward newspapers, or is because of the necessities imposed by a national war economy.

What are the facts which demand the impairment of one of the most important contributors to our successful drive for victory over our enemies? Do our war needs truly require this reduction? Or is there some other plan behind this move—some animus or group which schemes by this device to strangle American newspapers?

The rescinding of the order only ten days after it was announced is evidence of further hostility to the Press and desire by some people holding responsible positions in the Government to unnecessarily interfere with the proper and all important functioning of the Press of America.

While these threats were being made to seriously limit consumption of newsprint, the disclosure was made on the Senate Floor by the Junior Senator from Oregon (Mr. Holman) of the fabulous and extravagant use of paper to print the now famous magazine called "VICTORY", for the self-glorification of the present Administration.

It was further disclosed by the Junior Senator from Indiana (Mr. Willis) that the Government is using nearly ten times as much paper today as it did in 1941.

I believe that a full disclosure of this increased use of paper by the Government would show a determined desire on the part of some men in our present Government to supplant the free Press of our country by Government dominated "news" thru the use of handouts from the various bureaus.

As we move on in this gigantic effort of global war, there will be demands for regulations and restrictions of every manner and kind and the people will be looking constantly to their Representatives in Congress to protect them and the Press thru which they may be constantly advised and informed of our war effort.

In campaigns for enlistments, in scrap and salvage drives, in the sale of Government Bonds and Securities, in aiding the people concerning the details of rationing and restrictive orders, the Press of America has contributed its full share to the magnificent war effort of our country.

This unprecedented service, presenting complete daily, visual coverage of National objectives, could not have been accomplished by any other medium or agency.

Today and in the future, the housewives of America will be determining the daily diet under the point system rationing of food of our entire population thru the aid of a page out of some newspaper hanging in the kitchen or on the cupboard door.

A newspaper is not a warship, a plane, a tank, or a battalion of infantry but it serves in its field just as fittingly and importantly.

Modern war has spread from the land and the sea to a third dimension in the sky. It may also be said to have extended to a fourth dimension—the human mind. And in this field of warfare there can be no more successful weapon than the newspaper. It carries the war to our enemies—not by explosive bomb or torpedo—but by the greater impact of concrete expressions of the ideals of truth and liberty.

The newspaper has already had its valuable contributions to this nation reduced by the shortages of rubber and the rationing of gasoline. We cannot tolerate those stupid minds which fancy they can do without the newspaper—or who wants to bend it to their selfish purposes.

The destruction of the newspaper in Germany was one of the steps taken to put Hitler's gangsters into power. Without a strong, free Press in the United States, the American people will be without one of their most vigorous protagonists, one which more than any other force, save perhaps this Congress, has remained true to the idea of liberty.

Weaken the Press, and the people will be without a means thru which they can give fullest support to their Government in the grim fight ahead. On its side the Government will be without one of its most potent means to achieve an early victory.

The vital importance and essentiality of our American Press increases as the shadows of this global war lengthen. The importance and essentiality of our American Press will grow as the rays of Peace begin to dawn. It will be doubly important that all of our people be well informed by a free and alert Press concerning the various proposals of suggested programs for the future Peace of the World.

Congress has no greater responsibility than to assure the people that the Press of this country will be protected and preserved in full vigor and to notify the heads of the Bureaus that we, the Representatives of the people, will not tolerate any unnecessary or arbitrary restrictive or restraining order that will cause the Press of America to become either ineffective or impotent.

The movement should be seen for what it is. If there is malice, let us find the reasons for it. If it comes as the clumsy result of inexperienced administrators, let that fact be known—what cotrie, what clique or group of men constantly seek to impose restrictions on America's first and last line of freedom.

The newspapers of America are ready to share in any deprivation required by the war, but prudence demands that we inquire whether or not thru the instrumentality of war regulations the newspapers are being made the target of an attack by enemies of America—saboteurs who seek to destroy the newspapers and thru them to destroy one of the most treasured rights of the American citizens.

When the Government established the base for the use of newsprint, they chose the amount used by the various newspapers in 1941 when the interests of the American people were concerned with wars between foreign nations. This base ignored the interest and increased demands for news on the part of the American people now when our own flesh and blood and our own country is engaged in the death struggle of this global war.

We need but to turn our eyes toward the countries of our enemies to see what follows the destruction of a free press. We have only to remember the oppression of the peoples of other lands to know what comes as the result of Government control of newspapers by emergency regulations. We have only to read the history of our country to recall from what conditions our forefathers fled and why they surrounded the Press with constitutional guarantees.

Any step falsely taken which impairs the freedom and usefulness of newspapers is a perfidious act. Those who join any such conspiracy are enemies of this Republic and active supporters of those alien philosophies against which the whole military and civilian power of this country is marshalled.

The newspaper is the voice of freedom. Those great minds which built a refuge and bastion for free men in the United States perceived the necessity of keeping the press free and took steps to implement that freedom. Are we to permit the use of sly, indirect methods thru which the Press is to be brought under control?

The fact that we are in a war magnifies rather than minimizes the importance of the Press of this country. Our people are looking with increasing anxiety and interest for the unadulterated news of each day to be brought to them by a Press free from unnecessary and vicious bureaucratic efficiency-destroying restrictions. They are looking to Congress to protect their precious priceless right to be served by the Press of America.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY DEPARTMENT—

Howard Braasch celebrated his 18th birthday the 8th and Mrs. Frank Yunker on the 9th. Happy birthday Howard and Mrs. Yunker and many more of them!!

The goal of the Palos Park district in the $8,750,000 drive of the American Red Cross is $1200. This amount is to be collected during March and will probably be the only drive of 1943. This more than doubles the $538.49 collected during two drives last year. The greatest percentage raised will be used for services to the armed forces. Normal activities such as disaster relief and others usually financed by the Roll Call will be provided for to. Boundaries have been set up by the OCD with the following committee as solicitors:

Zone 1—Mrs. Thomas Little.

Zone 2—Mrs. Wallace Crawford.

Zone 3—Anita Kotrba and Mrs. W. K. Andrews, Jr.

Zone 4—Mrs. E. Guy Rivers and Mrs. Logan S. Furry.

Zone 5—Mrs. Joseph Lamplot.

Zone 6—Mrs. Wm. Mahaffey and Mrs. Harold A. Bailey.

Zone 7—Mrs. J. Robert Hall.

Zone 8—Mrs. Roy Keys and Mrs. Walter Roney.

Whenever possible, those donating to the American Red Cross should do so in their home area and thus give credit to your local chapter. Co-operation of all local residents will be greatly appreciated by the Palos Unit.

Mrs. Henry Robinson of 122nd Place is organizing a play school for children 4 and 5 years old. The school will be held from 9:30 to 12 every day except Saturday at her home. You may obtain more information by calling Mrs. Robinson at 774-M.

NOT even the march of 50,000,000 armed men can shut out your dreams. I was thinking about this while sitting at lunch with Frank Frisch.

"You are a long way from that dream you had at Bradenton, Fla., in 1935," I suggested.

Frisch smiled wanly. "I remember that one," he finally added.

"Yes," Frank continued, "that was quite a dream. Remember the night we sat under that Florida moon and you had me picked to be the first manager to win five pennants and five world series in a row? I even believed you."

"We had just beaten the Tigers in 1934 with a great young ball club. Back of the bat I had Bill Delancey, around 22, one of the greatest young catchers baseball ever saw. Smart, game, everything."

"In the box we had the two Deans, Diz and Paul, both young and strong and both great pitchers. And don't forget Pepper Martin. What a guy. I had Durocher at short, one of the best even if he never batted much over .200."

Coming Up

"And don't forget," I suggested, "the men you had coming up next year."

"I haven't forgotten that either," Frisch cut in.

"One of them was a young race horse by the name of Terry Moore, coming on from Columbus. Another was a pretty fair hitter by the name of Johnny Mize, heading in from Rochester. That wasn't all. We had a lot of good young-farm ball-players on tap, who have since been stars. We had everything going our way for the next four years. Don't forget a fellow named Joe Medwick. I could name you many others. And then the fuse blew out."

What Happened

What happened after that was entirely too morbid for Frisch to discuss at any length, as he stared out across New York snow in place of Florida's palms and sunshine.

Twenty-two-year-old Bill Delancey, the catching find of the day, developed a lung ailment and had to quit active play.

The two Deans, each over 6 feet 3, weighing 185 and 190 pounds, lost their arms.

Each should have been good for 10 more years—and don't forget together they were good for 50 winning games.

After this, one thing and another began to happen as the Cardinals finally had to wait eight years before they finally overhauled the Dodgers to win last fall.

They put Frisch out, although he had turned in a great managing job, and struggled along with others until they finally came to Billy Southworth, another able manager. And all this was something that Fate, not Frank Frisch, controlled along the rocky road to destiny.

Diz and Delancey

"There was the battery," Frisch said. "Dizzy Dean and Bill Delancey. I'd say in 1934 when Diz was right that he was the greatest pitcher I ever saw. Especially in a hot spot."

"Don't forget he gave me and left me many a headache. He was about as easy to handle as a king cobra. "But he could pitch. Any time for my money. You know he wanted to pitch the entire series against the Tigers? I can't beat 'em four straight, Diz said, but one can win four out of five. I believe he could. Killing speed, a great slow ball, perfect control, any sort of curve, a cool head and a stout heart—and perfect confidence in himself. He should never have quit baseball. He still would have made a fine first baseman or a good outfielder."

"Delancey? The greatest young catcher baseball ever looked at. Another Dickey, Cochrane or Hartnett. Maybe better."

"Let's wake up," Frisch said. "The dream ended eight years ago."

Frisch was one of the brightest football and baseball stars our two leading games have ever known.

Favored with physical skill, Frisch was even more important on the quick thinking, competitive side.

"Too many people forget," Frank told me, "just how important any competitive sport is. Competitive sport has a side that has been badly overlooked. And I mean in connection with any form of the war game we face today."

What Competition Means

"Hard competition," Frisch said, "means, first of all, complete concentration under fire. I mean the fire of the football field, baseball, basketball, boxing and other games."

"In these games you are taught and trained to think in a split second. If you are wrong, you are generally beaten. And in this country no one likes to be beaten. This is the finest sort of training for the individual ability that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker talks about. He is 100 per cent right."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for March 14

IN THE UPPER ROOM

LESSON TEXT—John 13:12-20; 14:1-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

Calvary and crucifixion were just ahead. Jesus gathered His disciples for a time of communion and instruction as they spent their last evening together. On the morrow would come betrayal, but now they and their Lord were together in the upper room.

But even here strife and dissension had apparently come in. There was probably some difference of opinion as to who should have the place of honor. To teach them the virtue of humility Jesus gave them an example, after which He continued with the precious counsel and prayer which are found in John 14 to 17.

Our lesson presents three things which our Lord gave to His disciples and to us (see John 17:20).

I. His Example—"Do as I Have Done" (13:12-20).

The act of Jesus in washing the disciples' feet placed Him, their Lord and Teacher, on the level of the most menial servant. It was an astonishing thing that He did, lowering Himself below their level to serve them.

His application of the object lesson was equally startling. "Ye call me Teacher and Lord, and ye say well," said He. Then as learners and servants He required of them the humility which would make them eager to do lowly service in His name.

There are more than enough folk who are willing to do the nice, pleasant things in the church, where they will be given recognition and praise. All too scarce are those Christlike folk who will serve in the hidden places where darkness, suffering, disease and sin make the natural man recoil in distress or fear.

II. His Assurance—"If I Go I Will Come Again" (14:1-3).

Following His resurrection Jesus was to go to the Father. He wanted them to be prepared for that time by making known to them the fact of His coming again. In that day His own shall be received unto Himself to abide with Him forever.

The second coming of Christ is not a strange doctrine held by little groups of people who are riding a theological hobby. It is one of the most blessed truths of Scripture. The hope of the Christian—yes, the only real hope of this disordered world—is the coming of Christ to reign. The New Testament is full of plain and helpful teaching on this subject.

While we await His coming, then, is there any encouragement for us as the burdens bear down and the way seems long? Yes, He says: "Let not your heart be troubled" (v. 1). There is little question that this passage has comforted more people than any other word in Scripture.

Countless bewildered and broken souls in all lands and times have here found the steady assurance of the one who has the power to give them rest and comfort.

There is good foundation for their composure of heart in a troubled world. They believe in God, and in Christ, who is one with the Father. Here is real security—infinite superiority to aught the world can give.

Then at the end of the road are the eternal dwelling places. What they are like is sufficiently revealed in the fact that they are in the Father's house. How shall we reach there? That is our last point. We have

III. His Guidance—"I Am the Way" (vv. 4-6).

To Christ's declaration that they knew the way, Thomas responded with a request for a definite statement. He wanted to be sure, and Christ responded by reminding him that He, their Lord, is the "way, the truth, and the life." Surely there could be no more complete provision for the guidance of the heavenly pilgrim.

Christ is "the way." If one takes the right road he will reach the right destination though he "cannot at first see it clearly. Perhaps this is the commonest mistake of the Christian. He frets too much about what lies ahead . . . and not enough about taking the right road" (Lesson Commentary).

He is "the truth." He is the final and complete revelation of God, and is therefore the One who will lead all those who walk the way by faith into the fullness of the truth. To know Christ is to know God.

He is "the life." He is life, and He alone can give eternal life to man. There is none other to whom man may turn for life, but in Christ it is found, and from Him it may be received by faith.

We have only touched the briefest beginning of what took place on that remarkable evening in the upper room. It was a time of richest spiritual significance, of dark betrayal, but also of closest communion. We continue next Sunday.

NO SEWING machine should be idle today. No matter if yours is not the newest model, keep it in good repair and include it in your decorating scheme. This sketch shows how one was fitted into a living room to look very smart and to do extra duty as a table.

Plywood or composition board may be used for the removable top, (see sketch). The top cover is of blue felt with a scalloped band stitched around it. This is quick and easy to do as it is not necessary to finish raw edges of felt. The full skirt is made of the best part of old sheets dyed a soft ecru tone. This is sewn to the seam allowance of the felt and all is tacked to the back of the removable top so that it may be removed easily. A pair of kitchen stools are painted cream color and

Help your Grocer

Let's Get Behind Him and Make Rationing a Success—Start Now to use more of the plentiful NON-RATIONED FOODS

THE man who runs your grocery store has his headaches these days. For months, in the face of shortages and lack of experienced help, he's been trying to carry on . . . trying to give you the kind of service you've always expected of him.

Now he has a brand new problem—point rationing. He has to collect the stamps from you as well as the cash.

It's a burden for him—sure—and for you. But he knows and you know that it's got to be done. It's the only fair way of making sure that everybody gets a fair share. That's our way of doing things.

So it's his job—and your job—everybody's job—to make point rationing work . . . as smoothly, as efficiently as possible. Traffic jams in food stores aren't going to help anybody.

Now there are a number of ways in which you can give this grocer of yours a real hand . . . in a good, neighborly American way. You can shop early in the day, early in the week. You can shop as infrequently as possible—once a week only, if you can manage. You can always make sure to have a shopping list, and to have your "point values" added up before you go to the store.

And you can help yourself as well as your grocer by using the plentiful, non-rationed foods as much as you can, instead of the scarce, rationed foods. Foods such as cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables, home-cooked soups, home-canned fruits and vegetables are not rationed and they deserve an important place in your wartime meals.

Because cereals are one of these abundant unrationed foods, we here at the Kellogg factory in Battle Creek have been doing everything we possibly can to meet the unprecedented demand for our products. We're sending millions upon millions of packages of crisp Kellogg Cereals to the boys in our armed forces. We're packing K-ration for troops in the front line of fighting. Even our machine shop is making gun parts! And we're short of help, too. There are 423 stars on the big service flag hanging in the lobby of the Kellogg building.

Other ways to help your Grocer...

1. Shop early in the day.
2. Shop early in the week.
3. Shop only once or twice a week.
4. Prepare a shopping list.
5. Add up total "point" values before going to the store.

But in spite of these wartime difficulties, we've doubled our efforts to be sure that we can supply Kellogg Cereals to the millions of American families who are depending on cereals more than ever.

Always famous for marvelous flavor, every Kellogg Cereal is made of WHOLE GRAIN or is restored to WHOLE GRAIN NUTRITIVE VALUES through the addition of thiamin (vitamin B₁), niacin and iron. With milk alone, or with milk and fruit, a bowl of crisp, delicious Kellogg Cereal gives you vitamins, minerals, protein, food-energy in one dish!

And remember this about cereals in your daily meals. They're quick and easy to prepare. No cooking, no pans or skillets to clean up. Even the dishes are easier to wash.

Cereals save time—work—fuel—other foods. Used in hamburger, meat-loaves, croquettes, etc., they help you stretch your meat . . . and they make milk go farther, too.

Think of cereals as one of your best, most nutritious, non-rationed foods and think of Kellogg Cereals as the finest you can buy.

FROM O.P.A. CONSUMER INSTRUCTION SHEET

"EAT MORE CEREALS—There is an abundance of cereals and, as you know, they are mighty economical. They are nourishing and delicious—what's more, cereals can be used to stretch your rations when mixed with vegetables and fruits."

MOKENA BOWLING NEWS

The fast stepping paperhangers white-washed the V-Eighters for three games Monday night and ran their winning streak to 7 games in a row. The paperhangers twins, Bueschel and Marschke continued to mow down the pins and took high series and high game for the night. The Mokena Oilers finally snapped their losing streak at the expense of the Smokers when they downed them for two games. The Mokena Robins took two games from the Bankers and in creased their lead to four games.

Capt. Geo. Rinke says, "his team looks more like a bowling team as they go along". Not to be outdone, Rudy Marschke says, "Extend the season and let us bowl the Robins each night, why we will be in first place in no time."

Looks like the pins were licking Spiess, Hamilton and Cappel Monday night instead of them licking the pins. Scores will not be mentioned for certain reasons.

Everett Cooper of the Bankers, says, "How can we get out of the red with paperhangers raking in all the dough."

Next Monday night the Paperhangers bowl the Mokena Oilers and are telling them they are out for 10 straights. Looks like Charlie Burkhardt and Fred Rauch may solve this by pouring oil in the holes of Andy's and Rudy's bowling balls. It might help. You can never tell what can happen when Charlie and Fred go into conference. If the V-Eighters lose to the Robins next week I believe Cooper & Hostert may take out their tool kits and give us an overhauling. How we need it!

Maybe the Bankers can get out of the red next week if Gus Braun's team is in a slump or Wes Cappel finally mows down those nasty pins.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Just a few lines to let you know I've been receiving your paper regular. Thanks. Am always glad to get it and think it really hits the spot for home town news.

The weather out here is fine, and they really keep us on the beam, as we call it.

I also want to thank the Woman's Aux., for the swell box of candy and cookies, the fellows and myself enjoyed eating them.
